WORKING WITH PERSONS WHO HAVE SEXUALLY OFFENDED: ASSESSMENT, TREATMENT, AND RISK MANAGEMENT

In spite of continued fear in the community over the risk posed by persons who have sexually offended, there is mounting evidence that rates of sexual offending and reoffending have been steadily declining for decades. But how have these declining rates been accomplished? Regional, national, and international legislators have generally adopted policies that might be described as “tough on crime”; however, it would appear that advances in evidence-based practices are more likely to account for gains made in public safety. This workshop will trace the progress of sexual violence prevention over the past 35 years, highlighting innovations in the assessment, treatment, and risk management of persons who have sexually offended. Specific focus will be on technological advances in risk assessment, trends towards holistic and strength-based interventions, and the growing use of collaborations in community-based risk management. Finally, participants will compare and contrast law-and-order approaches with evidence-based practices relying on scientific inquiry, explore the evolution of collaborative models of risk management, and discuss methods to ensure greater community safety while integrating persons who have sexually offended into the community.

Robin J. Wilson, PhD, ABPP is a respected researcher, educator, and board certified clinical psychologist who has worked with sexual offenders in hospital, correctional, and private practice settings for more than 30 years. Dr. Wilson has published over 100 scientific articles, book chapters, and other monographs in addition to maintaining an international practice based in Florida. One of only 40 certified trainers of the Static-99R, STABLE-2007, ACUTE-2007 in the world, he regularly consults on scoring questions. Past President of the Florida Association for the Treatment of Sexual Abusers, Dr. Wilson has served as an expert witness in many Court proceedings and as a member of law enforcement panels regarding community risk management.
